Students maintain diaries and prepare reports to critically reflect on their advocacy performance and internship experiences, fostering continuous improvement.

Assessment Methods

Assessment for the Moot Court and Internship course is conducted through continuous performance monitoring and a final evaluated submission:

- Continuous Assessment (Moot Court):
Based on written memorials and oral presentations. Evaluation considers clarity, legal research, formatting, advocacy skills, court etiquette, argument structure, and responsiveness to questions.
- Continuous Assessment (Internship):
Based on supervisor ratings from the host organization, reflecting punctuality, professional conduct, communication skills, task ownership, teamwork, willingness to learn, and adherence to professional ethics. The supervisor evaluation is submitted in the prescribed Sigma University format and forms a substantial component of the internship grade.
- Final Submission:
Each student must submit a comprehensive Internship Report that documents organizational understanding, legal processes observed, case analysis, and personal reflections on professional development.
The report is evaluated on:
 - Structure and depth of analysis
 - Alignment with course outcomes
 - Critical reflection and evidence-based observations
 - Academic writing standards
- Viva-Voce Examination:
Conducted to verify the student's learning, authenticity of report inputs, and ability to relate internship and moot court experiences to theoretical concepts acquired during the law program.
